Abstract

The Biologia Centrali-Americana (1879–1915), an obligate reference for the taxonomy of insects and other organisms from Mexico and Central America, is now available free on the web at <http://www.sil.si.edu/digitalcollections/bca/>. However, many included names are now out of date. We provide an updated list of all names of Staphylinidae (including Pselaphidae and Scaphidiidae) cited in the Biologia Centrali-Americana to use as a complement to that work. Of the 1610 staphylinid species-group names originally included, 929 remain as valid names without change, 581 have been previously transferred to other genera, 125 have been treated as junior synonyms, four treated as misidentifications of other names, and one (Cephaloplectus godmani Sharp, 1883) has been transferred to the family Ptiliidae. Our study also shows that 38 additional names should be transferred as new combinations to the genera Achenomorphus (from Aderocharis), Biocrypta and Homaeotarsus (from Ochthephilum), Neohypnus (from Xantholinus), and Platydracus (from Staphylinus and Amichorus), and seven species previously transferred to Medon should be returned to their original genus Scioporus as resurrected combinations.

Key words: Biologia Centrali-Americana, Coleoptera, Staphylinidae, Mexico, Central America, taxonomy

Introduction

The Biologia Centrali-Americana is one of the greatest works on the natural history of Mexico and Central America. The project, supported by Frederick DuCane Godman and Osbert Salvin, first appeared in 1879 with some sections on Mammalia, Aves, and Botany. The entire work was published between 1879–1915, and contains 215 parts of Zoology, 25 of Botany, and 17 of Archaeology, grouped in 63 volumes and accompanied by numerous plates of figures. Seven volumes were published in 17 parts or supplements that treated beetles. Although this is an “old classic work”, it remains a keystone source for taxonomic work on many insect groups. This is certainly the case for beetles.

For many years, availability of the Biologia Centrali-Americana was restricted to larger museums and libraries around the world. In Mexico three original copies are known to exist, all of them in institutions in Mexico City and the state of Mexico. Consulting them was difficult, especially for students or researchers outside of Mexico City. Although we lack specific details for Central American countries, we assume the situation is similar.

Recently, as part of joint efforts by the Natural History Museum in London and the National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D. C., all contents of the Biologia Centrali-Americana have been made available free on the internet at: <http://www.si.edu/digitalcollections/bca/>. This achievement provides a useful and indispensable tool for current taxonomic research on beetles from Mexico and Central America. However, the names of taxa described or cited in the Biologia are now a century or more out of date, and numerous changes in generic and species concepts during that time are not easily retrieved from a single source. The current status of all of the original geographic localities cited in the Insecta volumes was summarized by Selander & Vaurie (1962). As an analogous taxonomic complement for use of the Biologia sections dealing with the family Staphylinidae, we here provide a complete list of the current status of all staphylinid names cited in the Biologia, to minimize future taxonomic confusion.

Material and methods

All names of Staphylinidae cited in the Biologia Centrali-Americana (including the former families Pselaphidae and Scaphidiidae, now treated as staphylinid subfamilies) were entered into an Access database. The relevant sections were in the Insecta: Coleoptera, Volumes 1 (part 2) and 2 (part 1), as separate chapters on Staphylinidae (Sharp 1883–1887a), Pselaphidae (Sharp 1887c), and Scaphidiidae (Matthews 1888), with additions in the Supplement to Volume 1 (2) (Sharp 1887b) and in a list of additional taxa appended to Volume 2 (1) (Anonymous 1905). Several species included in the main Staphylinidae chapter were mentioned again in the Supplement (Sharp 1887b). Since the original Biologia page of these names is cited in the Supplement, the current status of these names can be looked up using the original Biologia page in our list. They are not listed again by Supplement page.

The database incorporated Biologia data in the following fields: Biologia volume, page number, genus, species, and author and year of each name as given in the Biologia (author and year were added by us when not given there). A few names that were subsequently interpreted as misidentifications of the cited name are indicated as such ("misidentification"). We then added fields for the current valid name for each species (or in the case of misidentifications, the species actually referred to), with its author and year; a recent reference that documents this current status; and the current subfamily in which the species is placed. Current valid names were checked against or taken from an unpublished database of world Staphylinidae species maintained by A. Newton, which is partially available on the internet (see Newton & Thayer 2005). The reference cited is usually the most recent published catalog or general work that includes the species, but in cases where no such general work is available or the current status is different, a specific reference that establishes or demonstrates the current status is given. In some cases, the cited reference may place the species in a subgenus, which was subsequently recognized as a genus. In a few cases, generic concepts that have been changed and widely accepted in recent years outside of the Neotropical region or in Mexico (e. g., breakup of the old broad generic concepts of Ochthephilum (= Cryptobium), Staphylinus, and Xantholinus) have not been applied to all relevant species in the rest of the Neotropical region, where the most recent species checklist was provided by Blackwelder (1944) or in some cases Herman (2001). When we feel that such modern generic concepts can be accurately applied to species described or mentioned in the Biologia that have not been formally transferred from their original genus, we list them in the modern genus as new combinations (comb. nov.) in place of a reference, indicating the genus from which each is being removed. These new combinations parallel similar changes implemented for the Mexican fauna in Navarrete-Heredia et al. (2002). These changes and detailed reasons for them are summarized in the Results section below.

Details about generic names and higher taxa, including authorship and current status, are not provided here, but are available for all Staphylinidae and related families, published (Newton & Thayer 1992; higher taxa only) or on the internet (Newton & Thayer 2005).

Results

A complete list of names of Staphylinidae as cited in the Biologia Centrali-Americana, the current valid names for these, and some documentation of this current status, is provided in Appendix 1. All names are included (changed or not) to provide in a single contribution all the information necessary as a complement for the staphylinid names cited in the Biologia Centrali-Americana, originally published in five separate parts and two volumes.

The Staphylinidae (sensu lato) of the Biologia Centrali-Americana included 1610 names for 1605 species and 5 varieties. Of those, 1335 names (83%) were described as new in the Biologia by David Sharp (1308 names) and Andrew Matthews (27 names). Currently 929 remain as valid names in the same genus, 581 have been previously transferred to other genera, 125 have been treated as junior synonyms (including 30 of those transferred to other genera), four treated as misidentifications of other names, and one (Cephaloplectus godmani Sharp, 1883) has been transferred to the family Ptiliidae.

Our study also shows that, compared to the last full checklist of Staphylinidae of Mexico and Central America (Blackwelder 1944), and partial world catalog of Herman (2001), 38 additional names should be transferred to other genera as new combinations, and seven names returned to their original genus, as explained below.

The genus Aderocharis Sharp, 1886 has been treated as a subgenus of Achenomorphus Motschulsky, 1858 in recent North American and Mexican studies (e.g., Arnett 1963, Navarrete-Heredia et al. 2002), therefore the following new combination is proposed:

Achenomorphus sagax (Sharp, 1886) comb. nov. ex Aderocharis

The genus Cryptobium Mannerheim, 1830 (synonym of Ochtheophilum Stephens, 1829), as used by Sharp (1885), has been divided into several genera by later authors. These genera are distinguished, e.g., in the keys to genera in Blackwelder (1939) and Navarrete-Heredia et al. (2002, p. 271). Sharp (1885) divided the species of Cryptobium recognized by him into two groups and provided other descriptive data that allow all of these species to be assigned to modern genera using the above keys. Thus, all species of Sharp's (1885: 507) group 1 ("elytra with a raised lateral line") can be referred to the genus Homaeotarsus Hochhuth, 1851, and species in Sharp's (1885: 526) group 2 ("elytra without lateral raised line") that also lack labral teeth and dense microsculpture on the head and pronotum can be referred to Biocrypta Casey, 1905, resulting in the following new combinations:

Biocrypta cognata (Sharp, 1885) comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Biocrypta curtipennis (Bernhauer & Schubert, 1912) (as brevipenne Sharp, 1885)
comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Biocrypta inquisitor (Sharp, 1885) comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Biocrypta lithocharina (Sharp, 1885) comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Biocrypta monticola (Sharp, 1885) comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Biocrypta sulphuripes (Erichson, 1840) (as perforatum Sharp, 1885) comb. nov. ex Ochtheophilum

Homaeotarsus antoniensis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus arduus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus celatus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus certatus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus chontalensis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus coloratus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus confinis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus derasus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus errans (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus filarius (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus grandiceps (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus jejunos (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus mixtus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus modestus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus nasutus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus ovaticeps (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus placidus (Sharp, 1887b) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus puncticollis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus rugosipennis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus salvini (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus sedatus (Sharp, 1887b) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus subgracilis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus tenuicornis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus tinctipennis (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum
Homaeotarsus umbratus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Ochthephilum

The following new combinations are proposed based on study by the third author (AFN) of types or identified specimens in the collections of the Field Museum of Natural History (FMNH) or Natural History Museum in London (BMNH) that have the characteristics of the genus they are assigned to here (e.g., using the generic keys in Navarrete-Heredia et al. 2002):

Neohypnus alticola (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Xantholinus (FMNH, 2 syntypes)
Neohypnus discretus (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Xantholinus (FMNH, 1 specimen identified by Bernhauer)
Neohypnus flagellifer (Sharp, 1885) comb nov. ex Xantholinus (FMNH, 1 syntype)
Platydracus chiriquensis (Sharp, 1884) comb nov. ex Staphylinus (BMNH, holotype)
Platydracus panamensis (Bernhauer & Schubert, 1914) comb nov. ex Staphylinus (BMNH, 2 syntypes of S. tarsalis Sharp, 1884)
Platydracus vividus (Sharp, 1884) comb nov. ex Amichorus (BMNH, holotype)

A final special case involves the genus Scioporus Sharp, 1886, which at one time was placed as a subgenus of Medon Stephens, 1833 (Bernhauer & Schubert 1912) and was subsequently again placed as a genus (Blackwelder 1944), but without returning all the original species to Scioporus. This is done here as resurrected combinations or new recombinations:

Scioporus apicipennis Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus chontalenus Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus fulvescens Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus latifrons Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus parvidens Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus sellatus Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon
Scioporus signatus Sharp, 1886 recomb nov. ex Medon

This paper is a contribution to the project "Colección Entomológica del Centro de Estudios en Zoología" supported by the Universidad de Guadalajara. The database of world Staphylinidae, against which the current status of names in the BCA was checked, has been supported in part by NSF grant DEB-0118749 to the Field Museum of Natural History (Margaret K. Thayer, Principal Investigator) and constructed with the assistance of many other sources and individuals, as detailed in the documentation of databases in Newton & Thayer (2005). We thank two reviewers for additional comments that have improved the manuscript.

Appendix

List of the Staphylinidae (Coleoptera) species described or cited in the Biologia Centrali-Americana: Insecta, Coleoptera, Volume 1 Part 2 (1883–1887) and Volume 2 Part 1 (1887–1905). Species names are organized by BCA volume and page number (in bold at left) and then in the sequence they appear on the page. Names in italics are as cited in the BCA; bold names indicate the current valid name for each cited species, followed by its author and year, and (in brackets) by a recent reference showing this status, or by indication that the status is new here (comb. nov. or recomb. nov.). The subfamily name at right indicates the current placement of the species.
